CARDINAL STRITCH COLLEGE

COLLEGE PATRON — This sculpture of St. Francis of Assisi, which stands in a small garden area outside the Art Department, symbolizes both the prevailing spirit and the long tradition of "caring and sharing" at Stritch.

1985

VOL. 16 NO. 1 WINTER

Construction Project Progress Reported

Because contractors managed to lay foundations, erect walls and put roofs in place for the College's new library, gymnasium and student union before heavy snows provided a "White Christmas," crews are able to continue working indoors... without interruption due to weather. This means Stritch's construction project could be completed during Summer 1985.

Meanwhile as architects, engineers and builders are attending to the installation of heating, lighting and plumbing equipment, windows, interior walls and doors, stairs and an elevator, plans are being formulated for occupancy and operation of the new structures.

New Challenges Emerge

Assuming that new furniture, carpeting, equipment, etc. will be delivered as ordered and installed as scheduled, a variety of new challenges have already surfaced. Examples include: (a) the logistics of relocating 100,000 library books from one building to another; (b) establishment of management policies for the new Student Union with its several major facilities and different student services offices; and (c) determination of rules and scheduling for intramural activities, varsity athletics and other events held in the auditorium-gymnasium.

Faculty, staff and students are addressing concerns and observing progress with great interest.

Campaign Moves Ahead

Meanwhile, the Development Office staff and Jubilee '87 Campaign volunteers are working hard to raise funds for the College's capital improvements program, according to Sr. Camille Kliebhan, president.

Graduation Plans Told For January Program

At 1:30 p.m., Sun., Jan. 20, Cardinal Stritch College will hold its second mid-year Commencement Program in Uihlein Hall at the Performing Arts Center, Mil. Over 240 students will be awarded Associate, Bachelor, and Master degrees during the graduation exercises.

Program participants will include: Sr. Doris Pehowski — invocation; Sr. Annice Diderrich — music; Sr. Camille Kliebhan — welcome and conferral of academic degrees; Dr. Robert Flahive — introduction of speaker; and Dr. Edward Clarke — commencement address.

Two Guest Lecturers Lead Annual Institute

"Focus on Excellence" was the theme of Stritch's Annual Faculty Institute, held in Serra Hall on Jan. 17-18. Dr. Marna Boyle headed the committee on arrangements.

Two guest lecturers highlighted the in-service program. Dr. James Redfield, professor of education, University of Chicago, spoke on "The Role of the College Professor" and Bro. Joseph Moloney, Catholic Charities of Brooklyn, NY, addressed the topic "Relaxation Versus Stress."

Property Being Sold To Finance Project

To help finance construction of Stritch's new library, auditorium/gymnasium, and student activities center, the College is selling 13.2 acres of unused campus land. Proceeds will be applied directly to the Jubilee '87 $10-Million Campaign, according to Dr. Robert Flahive, vice president.

Negotiations with several leading developers were conducted over an 18-month period by an Ad Hoc Committee of the Board of Directors before the most satisfactory offer was accepted last summer and approved by the Congregation of The Sisters of St. Francis of Assisi. Mr. James Loughlin heads the Board's special six-member committee, which has devoted many hours to studying and implementing the sale of CSC's excess property.

Presently, Glendale is holding public hearings regarding site development plans submitted by the successful bidder — Madsen Corp., Madison.

FOR HISTORICAL RECORDS — The above photo shows building progress made late last summer as the Student Union walls were in place and the superstructure for the 'Great Hall' began to take shape. More current photos will be published in the Spring issue.

Stritch Will Sponsor Three Elderhostels On Campus During June-July Sessions

Cardinal Stritch College will again feature three Elderhostels during its regular summer session, according to Sr. Lourdette Van Driel, CSC's coordinator. The 1985 programs are scheduled June 23-29, July 7-13 and July 21-27.

Combinations of three courses will be offered each period. Subjects and teachers include: (1) Contemporary American Poetry — Dr. Linda Plagman, Teilhard de Chardin — Sr. Lucille Walsh, and American Colonial Music and Culture — Sr. Noreen Zehnpeffennig; (2) European Holiday (slide tours) — Sr. Thomasita Fessler, Art of Europe — Sr. Jeanne Moynihan, European Life and Culture — Sr. Justine Peter; and (3) Greek and American Myths — Sr.

Inservice Bureau Aids Local School Districts

Stritch is offering 13 graduate courses in education, psychology and computer science at off-campus sites this semester, according to Pat Magestro, coordinator of CSC's Professional Inservice Bureau.

In all, nine public school districts and one private school are utilizing Stritch's outreach programs for promoting staff development and professional growth. Class locations in the metropolitan area range from Port Washington to Waukesha to South Milwaukee.

Courses Presented on Site

The Professional Inservice Bureau is organized to deliver "on site" both regular and special courses and workshops planned in cooperation with local administrators.

Board of Directors Adds One Member

Sr. Lauren Moss, director of St. Clare Center for Learning and Counseling at Lt. Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. School, Palos Park, IL, has been appointed to the College's Board of Directors for a 3-year term. She succeeds Sr. Agnes Clare Beyer, who served as a representative of the Sisters of St. Francis of Assisi 1979-84.

Sister Lauren, '68, holds a Master's degree from George Peabody College and a Doctoral degree from the University of New Mexico. Her religious/professional career has been devoted to special education of the handicapped. She formerly taught at Stritch and the University of New Mexico.

Appreciation Dinner

Sr. Camille Kliebhan hosted the seventh annual Appreciation Dinner for past and present CSC Board members, the President's Council, Jubilee '87 Campaign volunteers, major donors and other friends of the College on Tues. eve., Dec. 11, in Serra Hall.

Academic Dean Completes Initial Semester; Discusses Goals for Faculty and Programs

Helping Stritch articulate who and what it is today and what it wants to accomplish in the years ahead is the role Dr. Edward G. Clarke, Jr., envisions for himself as Stritch's newly-appointed academic dean. Though at his job only since August 1, 1984, Dr. Clarke views himself as "motivator, facilitator, encourager and change agent."

"In my role as dean," Dr. Clarke said, "I have very little direct power to enforce change. I can only focus people's attention on issues." He added, "Since I have an overview of the College, I must see what all programs and services at Stritch have in common and understand what the general goals are."

Focuses on Liberal Arts

Defining goals is of utmost importance to the new dean. For this reason, his chief concern is with the core component of Stritch's experience as assistant professor of science, math, physics and philosophy of science, and his five years as academic dean at Wadhams Hall Seminary College, Ogdensburg, NY.

At Wadhams, he said, he used Teilhard de Chardin as a model, especially Teilhard's synthetic view of the world. Stritch's dean taught in an interdisciplinary program which integrated science, philosophy, math and theology, in order to draw together the various threads of the liberal arts.

Prefers Smaller Colleges

In setting forth his views on education, Dr. Clarke voiced his preference for small colleges: "I do not view education as a series of intellectual exercises, but as an experience that aims at personal development as well as at academic development." Since personal development takes place best in a

When not at Stritch, the new dean said he enjoys "poking around Milwaukee to find all the wonderful amenities it has to offer. And, since I'm originally from New York City, I enjoy the urban area." These city excursions are taken with his wife Lori and daughters Michelle and Becky.

Besides touring the city, Dr. Clarke and his wife, who plays a recorder, direct congregational singing at their parish, Holy Family Church, in Whitefish Bay. The dean also enjoys reading novels, especially science fiction.

Finds Optimism Helpful

What also helps to lighten his job, he said, is the fact there is a "tremendous sense of movement, of optimism and of the future at Stritch." Of course, he noted, a lot has to do with the new buildings, which he sees as a vote of confidence. "They will dramatically change the environment, and this also will say who we are."

"Then, too, there is a renovation of offerings, a dynamic faculty (three more of whom obtained their Ph.D.'s in 1984) and the whole new vista opened up by the Programs in Management." According to Dr. Clarke, "Stritch is standing on a threshold of qualitative, not just quantitative change."

"Finally," he said, "in our goal-setting endeavors, we're going to think about what it means to be a Franciscan institution. This will be one of the most exciting things we'll be doing."

Graduate Division Sets Courses for Spring '85

On Tues., Nov. 13, Sr. Pat Zolecki addressed the same community group as a public service of the College. Her topic was "The Future: Do We Have a Choice?"

NEW TEAM LEADERS — Dr. Edward G. Clarke, Jr. (l.), academic dean, is shown conferring with Robert Anderson, business officer and treasurer of Cardinal Stritch College, Inc. Both administrators were appointed to their staff posts last summer.

program. "That is what everyone takes in common, and it is also that which is specific to Stritch," he said. He sees the core and the goals as being uniquely interrelated. "We must determine what our goals are, that is, what will happen to students who take our core," he explained.

"We do not want to say that every student who comes to Stritch will take three credits in literature; that's not a goal. Rather, we want to know what to expect or what will happen to the student as a result of taking those three credits."

Dr. Clarke's emphasis on goals — more specifically on education's eventual impact on students — derives, in part, from his previous school where there are not 300 students in a class but rather 30 or less, small colleges have an advantage. "And," he added, "small colleges allow for more personal relationships between students and faculty."

Seeks Personal Development

Being the dean, even of a small college, obviously causes certain tensions. Asked what he did to dissipate such tensions, he replied, "Actually, I find the periodic meetings — chaired by Sister Camille and held for members in administration — mutually supportive. They make the difficult part of my job easier."

STRITCH IS GROWING . . .

The Sisters of St. Francis of Assisi founded Cardinal Stritch College in order to provide quality higher education. Rooted in the Franciscan vision, this education is based on respect for all of creation, especially the dignity of the human person. Throughout the history of the College, the Sisters have endeavored to promote this kind of education through their commitment of personal, corporate and financial resources. At this time, we seek your collaboration to help further the mission and goals of Cardinal Stritch College as it enlarges its facilities and increases its service.

At Cardinal Stritch College, traditional and non-traditional students are experiencing the unique combination of the excellence of academic and humane studies in an atmosphere which recognizes the dignity of the individual. This environment provides for the development of spiritual values and personal responsibility in men and women who will bring to society in general — and the Milwaukee community in particular — the type of leadership qualities that will have a positive and lasting influence.

Private education makes choice possible in the overall educational scheme. I believe it is important to a community, and more specifically, the Milwaukee community, that a variety of educational opportunities exist for the young, as well as the adult, to express individuality, to make a difference, and ultimately to play a decisive role in the world.

Many small private colleges, like Cardinal Stritch, must compete for a shrinking source of funds and students. Only a college which is aggressively planning for the future will survive. Now, more than ever, private colleges need the support of the private sector. Stritch is eminently worthy of such support.

Stritch is an academic gem in the North Shore area. It combines standards of excellence in education with a personal interest in each student whether he or she is in a degree program or is an adult in search of information and enrichment. The variety of classes offered by the College enhances the lives of many residents as is evident by the interest and participation in them.

Students Use Self-Instructional Components To Learn and Master Basic Nursing Skills

Students in Nursing at Cardinal Stritch College are learning by a technique called the "Self-Instructional Component" (SIC). A form of independent learning, the SIC uses audio-visual equipment — supplementing the lecture and practical or clinical components.

SIC instructional materials are housed in the department's Learning Resource Center, coordinated by Mrs. Leslie Buttles. The Center also is used as a laboratory where students can practice and master basic nursing skills. Experiences gained here are designed to make students feel more comfortable in their profession and more confident about themselves and what they are doing.

Other Benefits Cited

A further advantage of the SIC is that it enables students to learn at their own pace, although they have deadlines for completing units which they are studying. Barbara Gorenstein, a second-year transfer from UW-Milwaukee, said: "You can do this on your own time."

Depending on how far along the student is in the program, he/she will have different units to be completed. Jennifer and Suzie Wittlin,

Student Group Forms To Encourage Alumni

"Stritch is in tune with the times," according to Sr. Lourdette Van Driel, director of alumni and community relations, "for student alumni groups have been developing on college campuses across the nation during recent years."

The CSC Student Alumni Association recently had its constitution approved by the Student Government Association — thanks to the efforts of Sandi Scott and Lori McCauley, student representatives on the Alumni Board.

"The main purpose of this organization is to promote positive relations and interaction between current students and graduates and to give service to these groups and to the College," according to Sister Lourdette. Membership is open to all Stritch students.

blood sisters and nursing majors, work on different levels. Suzie, who is in her first semester, is completing the following: Asepsis and Care of the Mouth, Body Mechanics, Care of the Skin, and Bed-Making. Units at which Jennifer, a second-year student, has worked include: Healing-Wound Care, Post-Operative Surgical Care, I.V.'s and Catheterization.

Practice Builds Confidence

Buttles, Gorenstein and the Wittlins all agree that, depending on the unit, the amount of time put into self-instruction each week varies, but the format remains basically the same. For an introduction to a unit, students use the Dukane machines which, basically, are filmstrip projectors, plus study guide booklets and other materials. Then, students practice on manikins provided or on other nursing students who might be working on the same unit. Finally, students review materials to study for the performance test.

The "Self-Instructional Component" provides students with knowledge and experience they would not have had otherwise. Now — when they go to their clinical component — they are able, according to the Wittlins, to feel "confident about themselves."

ORGANIZERS — Sr. Lourdette Van Driel, director of alumni and community relations, and Sandi Scott (c.) and Lori McCauley reviewed the constitution for the new CSC Student Alumni Association. Sandi and Lori are student representatives on the College's Alumni Board.
